President Garfield's Condition Steadily Improving.

His Recovery thought Certain if Improvement Continues.

Every Effort Made by Medical Men for His Comfort.

Bob Ingersoll Sheds Tears over the President's Misfortune.

The Tribune's Comments on Senator Jones' Remarks.

The Hallucinations of McNamara, a Crazy Man.

The President's Condition.

STEADILY IMPROVING.

Washington, July 13.—There is an increase of two beats in the pulse but the doctors do not consider this any bad sign and attribute it to the heat of the weather, and say that all favorable symptoms continue. The President has continued to rest and early this morning say that every minute that he continues to get along as he has since yesterday morning greatly increases his chances of final recovery. Some fear was expressed of gangrene in the wound but the surgeons do not apprehend this. They say that there is not a single symptom of gangrene as yet, and if gangrene has set in it would show itself by unmistakable signs.

He has every two hours taken some chicken broth, made more nutritious by the addition of albumen. At 12:30 p. m. to-day his pulse was 100, temperature 99, respiration 23. Will continue to keep you advised of progress.

ANOTHER GOOD SYMPTOM.

Executive Mansion, 3:30 p. m.—Among other favorable symptoms in the President's condition to-day, is the fact that he is beginning to find fault with his physicians because they do not give him enough to eat. He called this afternoon for beef steak, but upon being told that it was not thought prudent at present to allow him to eat such hearty food, he grumbled a little, but consented to compromise on an egg and say no more about it. An egg was given him. He wished to know this afternoon whether he could not be permitted to hold a cabinet meeting, and evinced generally a disposition to talk, which the physicians were obliged to discourage and restrain.

His symptoms at this hour, 3:30 p. m., continue to be favorable.

FAVORABLE.

Unofficial, midnight.—The President passed a most comfortable day and his condition to-night is in every way satisfactory as could be expected. He has taken more nourishment during the past eighteen hours than at any time since he was wounded and the food has all been retained and perfectly assimilated.

FOR HIS COMFORT.

In order to relieve him as far as possible from the oppression caused by the intense heat, the attending physicians this evening put into operation a tiny refrigerating apparatus, which it is thought will render the atmosphere in his room to-morrow much more comfortable than it has been to-day. It consists of a number of troughs of galvanized iron, about ten inches in width and fourteen feet in length, placed on the floor along the walls, and filled with water and broken ice. Over these troughs, and corresponding with them in length, are suspended sheets of flannel, the lower edges of which are immersed in the ice water which fills the troughs. The water is absorbed and carried upward by capillary attraction in the flannel as oil is in the wick of a lamp, until the sheets are saturated. This cold water bath, by direct contact with the air, and by rapid evaporation, which takes place over the extended surface of the flannel, lowers the temperature of the room. Although only a few hours have elapsed since this apparatus was put into operation, it has made a perceptible change, and it is thought its utility will still be more clearly demonstrated to-morrow.

QUIET AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

The day has been comparatively quiet at the executive mansion, for the reason that favorable bulletins have to a great extent relieved public anxiety, and there is a decrease of the number of callers.

INGERSOLL'S TEARS.

Chicago, July 6.—A special from Washington says: "The great big, bluff, hearty Ingersoll, who has loved Garfield many years but has lately been estranged, during the most critical and dangerous period of the President's relapse walked through the upper hall the tears streaming down his cheeks. The President has drawn the Cabinet to him as close personal friends."

A Crazy Loon.

Washington, July 6.—The fool McNamara said yesterday: "I came on here to get the authorities to call off the powers who are conspiring against me. There is a political conspiracy of spiritualistic mediums conspired to obtain possession of my mind. They are trying to put me in my brain. They revealed to me in 1875, while I was in San Francisco, that I was to shoot Grant and the Prince of Wales, the eldest son of the Dutch widow, and they have been pursuing me ever since with spiritual exhortations to carry out their behests. I have been doing battle against them ever since last month. I came from San Francisco to Philadelphia and tried to make a statement in one of the courts that the justice might aid me to fight the conspiracy, but I saw no opportunity to be heard in court unless I committed some misdemeanor and got myself arrested. I split a brick in half and put the halves in my overcoat pockets. When I got to the postoffice I took one from my pocket and threw it through one of the large windows, calling out at the same time 'That is a better shot than the one aimed at the President of the United States.' He did actually perform this deed. He is a medium sized man of spare build, has gray hair and ragged clothing with only a dollar in his pocket."

What Did Jones Mean?

Washington, July 6.—The Tribune referring to Senator Jones' remark that Arthur's Presidency would not mean much more than a change of men, says: As the representative of the rotten borough of the State of Nevada, a particular intimate of Conkling, his utterances are particularly significant. If he means that Arthur will dismiss the present cabinet and appoint to leading offices different men than those selected by Garfield it would be difficult to conceive a more radical change. It is the change most seriously apprehended, like the change of Tyler, Fillmore and Andy Johnson. If Jones speaks by authority the Tribune hopes he may say something more encouraging.

CHASED BY INDIANS.

The Party Whom the Reds Intended to Take In.

Among the passengers on the Atlantic Express yesterday were three gentlemen prominent in mining circles in the State of Chihuahua. One of them was a distinguished citizen of Chihuahua, Gen. Juan M. Zuloaga, principal owner of the "Dolores" mine in the Sierra Madre Mts., one of the richest properties in the State. He is a nephew of an ex-President of the Mexican Republic and son of an ex-Governor of Chihuahua. He was accompanied by A. R. Hammond, a mining engineer of prominence; and Walter Carrington, another practical mining man. They are on their way to New York, and will most likely visit London before their return to Chihuahua in October. The object of their mission is to stock the mine or effect a sale, Mr. Hammond holding a power of attorney to dispose of the property for which $500,000 cash was recently refused. They reached El Paso on Monday having met with many delays, a part of their stock having been stolen by the same Indians who massacred the engineering party and jumped the stage, and who followed them up for seventy-five miles.

They relate that ten days or two weeks ago, five rancheros were killed by Indians sixty miles from Chihuahua. Sixty head of stock were run off by the the reds, who heaped the bodies of the rancheros to the ground and burned them. Just as the stage was about leaving Chihuahua for Paso del Norte one day up came a courier with information of the massacre of the five men. There was great excitement among the passengers who had seats on the stage, nearly all of whom were without arms, some of them Americans who had sold their rifles in the city, not considering the stage journey an unsafe one, and not wishing to be encumbered by too many traps. As soon as they learned that Indians were depreeding along the line, offers of $100 were made for rifles, but there were no sellers.

On account of this massacre, and for reason of other rumors showing the route to be unsafe, Gen. Zuloaga and party, whose engagements in the East were imperative, made extra preparations for taking the journey. The General took his private coach and made up a party, eight men in all, who had seen fighting, and armed to the teeth were a formidable party to stand off an average sized band of reds. The General himself is an old Indian fighter, and renowned for his bravery in Chihuahua, assumed command of the party.

On reaching Santa Clara, sixty miles below Lucero, the General was informed by Lieut. Gonzales that Indians were still lurking in the neighborhood. The day previous he had had a little brush with the reds and jumped one camp, capturing seventeen horses. The party was advised to turn back, but they considered themselves able to make their trip and beat off marauders.

About twenty miles below Lucero eleven head of stock were cut off by the Indians, leaving only nine mules. They left Lucero Thursday morning, and were only about two hours ahead of the engineering party. Indian signs were visible, and the coach bowed along having more the appearance of a war ship than a conveyance of traveling gentlemen. Those on top had their guns in position ready for immediate action, while rifles were held out of the windows, and the men who held them were on the qui vive for the signal to turn them loose. The little valley between the two mountains where the massacre was made, was well known as a bad place to be caught by ambushed reds, and through that the coach was pulled at a high rate of speed the passengers yelling and discharging the guns. There is no doubt but what the Indians were in the neighborhood, but, true to their instincts, did not deem it wise to make a break for such a party when there was any show of fighting.

It is considered that it was this party that the Indians were after, and killed the five men merely because they came in their way. They knew well enough that it was a private coach that they were following, and are more anxious to tackle such an outfit than the regular mail coaches, as in cases of that kind the military authorities are more active in equipping expeditions to hunt them down.

There appears to be some doubt as to whether it is really Nane's band that has been committing these depredations, many people claiming that a large body of Mesquero Apaches are off their reservation, and have crossed into Old Mexico.

Two detachments of mounted Mexican troops are now in the field, and have orders to make a thorough campaign in the Indian-infested country.

On Sunday citizens of El Paso went to Ft. Bliss and asked that U. S. troops and the Indian scouts be sent up and down the river to prevent a crossing of the hostiles. The officers had a different answer to that of the commander of the Mexican post, saying that perhaps they might get ready to start the next day. The inactivity of our troops is strangely in contrast with that of the Mexican troops, and we must confess that U. S. regulars suffer by comparison as regards Indian warfare.

Milt. Yarberry who killed Charles Campbell, the A. & P. R. R. carpenter at Albuquerque, has been bound over in $10,000 for the action of the grand jury. He will probably remain in jail.

Fitzgerald, formerly a brakeman on the A. T. & S. F., who lived in Las Vegas for a time, was recently killed on the Union Pacific R'y at Rawlins, Wyoming.
